

From the Editor

This is a very interesting special issue that has two special sections of articles devoted to a specific topic. A great deal of dedication by the guest editors of each special section helped to make this issue of WORK a reality.

The first special section is about Work in Bangladesh. It is co-guest edited by Debra Lindstrom-Hazel, Md. Monjurul Habib, Nazum Nahar and Mohammad Mosayed Ullah. This special section contains eight articles on a variety of topics such as musculoskeletal discomfort/pain in paper based office workers, metal workers, women engaged in rural household activities and among physical and occupational therapists among other topics. Although I have yet to travel to Bangladesh, the articles made this striking country come alive.

The second special section is on Parenting. This special section contains 13 articles. The special section was co-guest edited by Jan Froehlich and Patricia Morgan. Being a parent, an Amma (grandmother in Icelandic), a shared caregiver to my mom, and working full time, I was intrigued by all of the topics. I know that you will be, too.

My appreciation is extended to all of the guest editors of this very informative special issue.

As always, I welcome hearing from you and hope that you will submit your research and scholarly work, case studies, and narratives in transitions to our journal.

Cheers,
Karen
