EDITORIAL

This issue contains in addition to regular Papers the following: Part VII of the Proceedings of the 7. International Congress of Biorheology, Nancy, France, June 1989. It consists of the Plenary Lecture by Patrick Sourander entitled "Neurobiorheology: A new branch of biorheology. Historical background and current ideas." It has a Report by Geert Schmid-Schönbein on the First World Congress on Biomechanics.

Since this issue completes the activities of one of us (A.L.C.) as Executive Editor, Co-Editor-in-Chief and Director of the Executive Editorial Office (EEO), a special Editorial by A.L. Copley is included. He will continue to be associated with our Journal as Consulting Editor and as Liaison Officer of the International Society of Biorheology, of which BIORHEOLOGY is one of its two Official Journals, with Pergamon Press.

From now on, Alex Silberberg and Pedro Verdugo will act as Co-Editors-in-Chief. The address of the EEO of BIORHEOLOGY, with Alex Silberberg as its Director and Executive Editor, is The Weizmann Institute of Science, Department of Material and Interface Science, Rehovot 76100, Israel.

Authors are asked to submit two copies of their manuscripts to Alex Silberberg at the EEO in Rehovot. Further details, including revised Instructions to Authors will be given in the next issue, a double issue, number 1/2 of volume 29 of BIORHEOLOGY.

Letters to the Editors-in-Chief should be submitted to Alex Silberberg at the EEO.

Our best wishes to our Editors, Referees, Authors and Readers for 1992!

Alex Silberberg
