

From the Editor

Congratulations to Guest Editor and editorial board member Dr. Roll on the publication of this special issue of WORK, entitled, Injury and Prevention in Health Care Workers.

This issue also contains a section of six regular articles. This section begins with Bringsén and colleagues' article on the results of a focus group study among healthcare workers in Sweden.

The next article is by Drs. Kawada and Yamada who investigated job satisfaction in occupational workers.

Lundqvist, Eriksson and Ekberg explored the relationship between managers' leadership and their health.

Mirmohammadi and colleagues provide a study on the effects of training intervention on non-ergonomic positions among video display terminals (VDT) users.

Dr. Ramadan conducted an interesting study on the effects of protective respiratory devices and physical workloads in harsh weather conditions on workers' physiological measures and exertion ratings.

Wästberg, Haglund and Eklund conducted a study using The Work Environment Impact Scale – Self-Rating (WEIS-SR) in primary health care in Sweden. This articles added to the growing publications on the WEIS-SR.

I know you will enjoy reading this issue of WORK. As always, I welcome hearing from you.

Cheers
