

From the Editor

I thoroughly enjoy children's books. Having four grandchildren has allowed me to keep up with the current books and to share some of the beloved books from my three children's and my childhood. Some of my all-time favorite books are: What Do You Do With an Idea?, If You Give a Mouse a Cookie, Where the Wild Things Are, I'll Love You Forever, The Rainbow Fish, and The Boxcar Children. Children's literature can be a powerful educational tool because these books can use images and words through engaging stories to convey messages. I am especially inspired by the book, What Do You Do With an Idea? which starts with, "One day, I had an idea. 'Where did it come from? Why is it here?' I wondered, 'What do you do with an idea?'. The book concludes with, "And then, I realized what you do with an idea . . . You change the world" (Yamada, K. 2013).

The ideas in this issue of WORK, like all the other issues that proceed it, have the potential to "change the world" through the advancement of knowledge in the broad occupation of work.

This issue of WORK has three sections. The issue begins with a special section on Complementary and Integrative Medicine in Healthcare which was expertly guest edited by Dr. Valerie Rice. The section contains six articles with an introduction by Valerie, a dear friend and colleague.

The next section contains our monthly article on Ergonomics in a Global World titled: Range of Rest Posture of human lower limbs. This was a paper presented at the 2018 International Ergonomics Association (IEA) Congress in Florence, Italy.

Finally, the issue concludes with nine regular articles that take us around the globe on a variety of topics such as the effect of yoga on vigilance; self-rated sleep and state anxiety in border security force personnel in India; measuring perceived efficacy for coping with PTSD in the workplace; the bibliometric analysis of the body posture in relation to visual display terminals; and physical therapists with work-related musculoskeletal disorders in the state of Kuwait with a comparison across countries and health care professions.
