“Keep your thoughts positive because your thoughts become your words. Keep your words positive because your words become your behavior. Keep your behavior positive because your behavior becomes your habits. Keep your habits positive because your habits become your values. Keep your values positive because your values become your destiny.” Mahatma Gandhi

Similar to many people globally, I have been working remotely for almost a year. I am grateful that with the support of my employer, Boston University, I was able to pivot to a virtual context for teaching, meetings and my other work tasks. During this time, I have also focused on mental health with self-care occupations such as virtual yoga, walks in nature, iPhone photography, cross country skiing when the weather permits, communicating with family and friends on Zoom, participating in book and film clubs and beginning to learn Spanish. Of course, trying new bread recipes has become a part of this new health and wellness routine. As we begin 2021, I hope you will also make it a priority to focus on your mental as well as physical health.

In this issue, Das and Adams address the importance of this focus in their article, Nurses’ physical activity study: Caring for you so you can care for others. This issue contains 20 manuscripts on a variety of other topics such as open space offices, burnout, work stress, safety attitude, resilience, safety performance and the impact of COVID-19.

I hope you are enjoying the Learn at WORK webinars. Here are some of the upcoming 2021 webinars:
