As I write this From the Editor, I received an e-mail that the U.S. News & World Report ranking of the country’s best graduate schools were reported. It was exciting to learn that our Boston University occupational therapy graduate program continued to rank #1 in the country. Although skeptics will voice that rankings are inherently imperfect, receiving this acknowledgement is much appreciated. This announcement made me reflect on: What does it take to be number one in any area?

Coach Vincent T. Lombardi perhaps has one of the most notable quotes about being number one:

“Winning is not a sometime thing; it’s an all the time thing. You don’t win once in a while; you don’t do things right once in a while; you do them right all of the time. Winning is a habit. Unfortunately, so is losing. There is no room for second place. There is only one place in my game, and that’s first place... Running a football team is no different than running any other kind of organization – an army, a political party or a business. The principles are the same. The object is to win – to beat the other guy. Maybe that sounds hard or cruel. I don’t think it is. It is a reality of life that men are competitive and the most competitive games draw the most competitive men. That’s why they are there – to compete. The object is to win fairly, squarely, by the rules – but to win. And in truth, I’ve never known a man worth his salt who in the long run, deep down in his heart, didn’t appreciate the grind, the discipline. There is something in good men that really yearns for discipline and the harsh reality of head to head combat. I don’t say these things because I believe in the ‘brute’ nature of men or that men must be brutalized to be combative. I believe in God, and I believe in human decency. But I firmly believe that any man’s finest hour – his greatest fulfillment to all he holds dear – is that moment when he has worked his heart out in a good cause and lies exhausted on the field of battle – victorious” (http://vincelombardi.com/number-one.html).

Lombardi is passionate about the importance of being number 1? I suggest that its determination, perseverance, ambition, acting on your ambition, resilience, being hopeful and learning from your setbacks. Many of these characteristics are topics in articles published in WORK.

This issue of WORK contains 16 articles with a special section on occupational ergonomics. The topics are varied, such as road casualties, physician decision-making in the management of work-related upper extremity injuries, a user-centered design approach to new hard hats, influence of age on lifting capacity, a systematic review of lost-time injuries in the global mining industry among many others. I know you will find these articles meaningful.

Our 2018 Learn at WORK webinar series, presented in cooperation with the Human Factors and Ergonomics Society (HFES) are being well received. I hope you can join us.
